

Sentence Beginnings

Tired of writing the same boring sentences?

Try starting the sentence by saying WHEN it happened.

A moment later, the screaming began.

When it was all over, the silence was deafening.

In the days that followed, the newspapers were full of details about the explosion.

Try starting the sentence by saying HOW it happened.

Hesitantly, the children approached the shark enclosure.

With overwhelming panic, Simon ran away from the broken window.

Evilly, Dr No laughed as he walked away from the chaos.

Secretively, the children entered the principal's office.

Try starting a sentence by saying WHERE it happened.

From the other side of the playground, the girl stood all alone.

From behind the school building, Elliott came stumbling, disorientated and bleeding.

From the doorway, Jamie looked down at the bundle.

Try starting the sentence with an ADJECTIVE.

Bright sunlight streamed into the room.

Anxious moments passed before he acted.

Watchful eyes followed the boy as he walked past the old mansion.

An awkward silence settled in the room.

Try starting the sentence with a VERB.

Sorting through his meagre possessions, Kit wondered why he had thought that any of these items were once important to him.

Opening his eyes he peered around the darken room.

Staring happily out the window, he took in the beauty of the sea.